

Royal Pharmaceutical Society
of Great Britain

BMJ Group

Publishing Director – BNF Publications

Attractive competitive package

Location: Central London

Owing to major success and development, this highly respected STM publisher is looking to hire a Publishing Director to head a division responsible for a high-profile joint venture. Accountable to a joint-venture Board, this is a varied and challenging position for an outstanding all-rounder who can combine leadership skills with the strategic development of the division's products. The role will involve leading the strategic, commercial and operational development of the publishing team and its products. Responsibilities include developing and implementing the business strategy, creating and managing international partnerships and strategic alliances, leading and motivating a department of around 40 people, and managing a substantial budget. The right person will be educated to degree level, ideally with a postgraduate management qualification. They will also have a well-established track record of successful management at a senior level within STM or reference work publishing which must include considerable product development experience. Strong leadership and proven partnership management skills are also essential.

The Society is an equal opportunities employer